Vice President of Development

Reporting to the President and CEO, the Vice President of Development (VPD) serves on the leadership team of Warren Village and is responsible for the strategy, oversight and implementation of all fundraising, marketing, volunteer and resource development activities. The VPD manages, mentors and motivates a team of five development professionals in a relationship-based approach to increasing awareness, revenue and resources for the organization. Focused on creating and implementing the vision, plan, tactics and infrastructure needed to significantly increase contributed revenue above the current $2.4M annually raised, the VPD oversee all aspects of the cultivation and stewardship of major gifts, federal and state grants, corporate partnerships, special events, volunteers, and foundation support.

The VPD expands and diversifies Warren Village’s donor base and pipeline by coaching and partnering with the President and CEO, organization and development team members, the board of trustees, committees, and other ambassador groups. The VPD confidently and charismatically builds and deepens donor relationships, Denver connections and civic partnerships. This position helps creatively elevate the brand, inspires the community and represents the organization. The VPD plays a critical role in the future success and expanded impact of Warren Village.

Like many human services nonprofits, Warren Village is on the front lines of the COVID19 pandemic response and support. Our residents and alumni, like many working poor in our society, will bear the brunt of the economic repercussions of the pandemic. Warren Village, thanks to great community support and smart financial planning, is well-positioned to weather this current phase and continue our push for growth in services. Now more than ever our model is needed. And now, more than ever, we seek a strategic and skilled development leader to take our fundraising to the next level in support of our aspirations for broader service in this community.
